

IAN D'AGATA WINE REVIEW

Luminous pale straw-green with golden highlights. Inviting aromas of dried yellow apple and of fresh mela annurca, licorice, menthol, white truffle, candied orange peel, lemon ice, faded jasmine and a boatload of minerals. At once penetrating and vibrant, with crisp clean orchard fruit flavours intertwined with a mineral netting and a minty nuance. Closes long and pure on the stony, classically austere, rising finish. The wine bottle has a very pretty label where lemon yellow dominates and makes it instantly recognizable. Only 2800 bottles and 500 magnums for the world, this is both hard to find and expensive, but completely worth it. Like the white wines of Valentini, Tiberio, Terlano and Miani, this really takes Italian white wine to next level territory.

Drinking window: 2026-2046.
